

6 November 2007

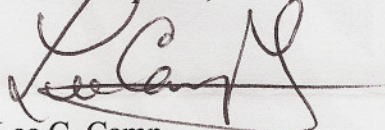

To Whom It May Concern:

Steve Holladay provided an excellent overview of some of the major factors at work in sexual addiction to our student body. I invited Steve to make a presentation in our "University Bible" convocation, which is an assembly of our entire student body. I was very impressed that Steve was able, in the relatively brief amount of time made available to him, to introduce our student body to some of the basic dynamics in the addictive cycle, and also to suggest first responses and resources that are available.

Not only did he present very helpful material, but he did so in a creative manner that proved engaging and at times, appropriately humorous. His ability to use such a creative and appropriately humorous approach made it possible to address issues that, otherwise, seem too awkward to address in such groups. I would give a strong recommendation on Steve's behalf to any church or college group that desires to open up a space for constructive dialog and healthy conversation around this issue that plagues so very many in our churches and campuses.

If I may be of any help answering any questions about Steve's presentation or his ministry, please do not hesitate to contact me at 615 966 5755.

Grace and peace,

Lee C. Camp
Assoc. Prof. of Theology & Ethics