

Steve,

I attended a recent workshop presented by Ultimate Escape. I am a home schooling mom who is with my child every single day. He doesn't have daily peer influence and without going to your workshop, I would have assumed he would never be tempted with this kind of stuff!

I want you to know that after attending, I came home and talked to my teenage son. I took your advice and just told him a little about pornography and the struggles some kids his age have with the addiction. He burst into tears and told me that he had looked at some things on the computer about 5 times because he was curious. He said he felt total guilt and would go to his room and cry for about an hour then would only find himself looking again. He would pray God would forgive him and said he was afraid he wouldn't go to heaven.

I told him a little about your workshop and how it was really a common thing for boys to be curious and to always feel he could come to me or his dad (who was with us thru this entire conversation) with any questions he had.

We also put restrictions on computer use. I had noticed he was up late at night and he would say he was playing games. I believed him.

I thought we had talked to him enough about sex and the opposite sex, but what I realized is that he still had so many questions. We then pulled all our kids together and read the God's Design for Sex book series. I found that even my oldest child, who I thought I had explained everything to, even had questions. We also talked about homosexuality.

So I want to thank you from the bottom of my heart for your workshop. I feel as if my son has been saved from this addiction. God is using you for an awesome ministry. You are an obvious answer to my son's prayers and my own prayers!

God Bless!!
